Memory Lane

Morningstar Living is dedicated to providing education to caregivers, professionals and community members about dementia-related diseases. Memory Lane is an initiative aimed at providing information and education to the public, specifically about dementia.

Alzheimer's disease affects more than memory—it also damages the brain's blood vessels and the protective blood-brain barrier. In this seminar, Silvia Fossati, PhD, Director, Alzheimer's Center at Temple will share emerging findings on how abnormal amyloid and tau proteins stress brain blood vessel cells, disrupt energy production, trigger inflammation, and accelerate nerve cell damage. Dr. Fossati will highlight groundbreaking research being conducted at Temple University that shows how targeting specific mitochondrial enzymes may protect blood vessels, restore barrier function, and improve the brain's ability to clear toxic proteins. These discoveries point to promising new treatment strategies now being explored for future clinical trials.
