From CRISPR in Space to Public Radio: Bethlehem Ninth-Grader Aryash Shyam Named Host of WDIY's Teen Scientist

Before starting high school, Aryash Shyam had already designed a CRISPR-based diagnostic for spaceflight, built and coded an AI-powered robot that targets weeds with laser precision, and created an award-winning documentary about the ethics of gene editing. Now the Bethlehem student is bringing the same curiosity, and the perspective of someone who builds, tests, and investigates, to public radio.

WDIY 88.1 FM, the Lehigh Valley's community public radio station and NPR member station, has named Aryash Shyam host of its award-winning monthly program, Teen Scientist, continuing the station's commitment to giving young voices a platform to explore the issues shaping our future. His first episode aired Thursday, August 6, 2026, at 6:00 p.m. and asked a question millions of students, parents, and teachers are already debating: Is artificial intelligence transforming education, or simply finishing students' homework?

The appointment brings an uncommon perspective to science broadcasting: a host who isn't simply interviewing leading researchers, but is actively conducting scientific research, designing technology, and competing at the national level himself. In 2026, Genes in Space selected Aryash as one of five Junior Scientist Award recipients from 130 middle-school submissions for his proposal, "Validating a Cell-Free CRISPR Fluorescent RNA Diagnostic in Microgravity."

Aryash also designed, built, and coded GreenBeam, a computer-vision robot that targets weeds with a precision laser instead of chemical herbicide.

Beyond the lab, Aryash created Editing Humanity: A CRISPR Conundrum, a documentary examining the science and ethics of gene editing, and created a student-led STEM education channel covering artificial intelligence, coding, mathematics, and science. Across those projects, his goal is the same: make complex ideas understandable, useful, and open to young people.

Teen Scientist airs on the first Thursday of each month from 6:00 to 6:30 p.m. on WDIY 88.1 FM and is also available on WDIY.org and major podcast platforms.

2 Northampton County Senior Living Communities Earn Safest Places to Live Designation

Heritage Senior Living is proud to announce that two of its Northampton County senior living communities have been recognized as Safest Places to Live™ for 2026. This prestigious national designation is awarded to communities that demonstrate an elite commitment to resident safety by meeting the rigorous 7-Point Standard of Resident Security.

Heritage Senior Living communities in Northampton County include:

- Traditions of Hanover, 5300 Northgate Drive, Bethlehem
- The Birches of Lehigh Valley, 5030 Freemansburg Avenue, Easton

"The recognition as Safest Places to Live reflects Heritage Senior Living's commitment to resident safety and quality of life across all communities and the dedication of our team members who create secure, comfortable environments where residents feel at home," said Gretchen Vakiener, vice president of sales and marketing for Heritage Senior Living.

In addition to the two Northampton County communities, all Heritage Senior Living communities received the Safest Places to Live designation.

To qualify, each recognized community demonstrated compliance with seven criteria in the Safest Places to Live Standard of Resident Security: Controlled & Accountable Access, Visible Identification, Verified Identity, Real-Time Situational Awareness, Resident & Family Transparency, Data Privacy, and Mass Emergency Communication.

For more information, visit www.heritagesl.com/our-communities/ or learn more about the Safest Places to Live™ program at <https://safestplaces-tolive.com/about/>.
